QUESTIONS OF THE WEEK

(Editor's note) Here are some questions asked by Virginia farmers during the past week, as reported by county agricultural agents, Staff members of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute Agricultural Extension Service and/or Experiment Station supply the answers).

Q. How can we get farm land in Virginia taxed on farm land values rather than on real estate values?

A. This is a real puzzler. Of course, you can always appeal if you feel your assessment rates are too high. Another possibility is special legislation, and this is an involved process.

Q. What are the possibilities of grazing sudax?

A. The experiment station at VPI does not have complete information on grazing sudax. A few farmers in the state have used sudax for grazing, but report it is better adapted for green chop. If you do graze it, observe the same precautions as when grazing sudan grass.

Q. Are studies now being made for a cheap test for leptospirosis?

A.Yes, efforts are being made to standardize the test now in use, and to develop other, quicker, cheaper tests. One test that seems promising, experimentally at least, is a skin test.

Q. Will chloro IPC be effective in controlling chickweed in alfalfa if applied while ground and plants are frozen?

A. Yes.

Q. How long after treating chickweed in alfalfa with chloro IPC will any results be noticed?

A. This depends on the weather. The chemical acts slowly in cold weather, and results will start showing up when the chickweed begins to grow.

Q. Is it better to use weed killer on lawns in spray form, or to buy fertilizer containing wee d killer ingredients?

A. Either way is effective. The spray usually is less expensive, but more trouble.

IN FASHION NOW

Short sleeves, short coats, and short skirts! They all are very evident in this season's showings by designers. Sleeves may come just below the elbow or above but very few sleeves to the wrist are seen even on top coats.

While skirts are short they are fashioned for greater ease than were those of the past year. There is more fullness at the top and bottom than here to fore.

Sweaters are definitely on the short side. Some have decorations that compliment the dress with which they are worn. Braid or ribbon rosettes follow the necklines in many of these. They may be of nubby wools or of some of the new knitting materials.

We have noticed that some slow-moving individuals like to speed up all others.

Bible Material: John 10 through 11.
Devotional Reading: Romans 8:31-39.

MANY MORE people died in Palestine than Jesus brought back to life. He did not spend all his life, or anywhere near the most of it, in breaking up funerals. We hear actually of only three particular cases where he brought a dead person to life; John tells of only one, the story of Lazarus. Jesus took death as a natural end of life. It is the one event to which every one can confidently look forward. Jesus did not set out to make a holiday for death. He did not share the modern prejudice against even using such "ugly" words as "die" or "dead."

Dr. Foreman

No Tears for Lazarus

Why then did the Master weep when Lazarus died? Some think he wept for himself; but this would be most unlike him. Self-pity would be the last sin you could think of in connection with Jesus. Others think he wept for Lazarus. This could scarcely be true; for he knew he was going to restore the man to his family. Some would agree to this—Jesus did not mourn for a man death could not hold. Yet could he have been weeping for the opposite reason—that Lazarus had to come back to this world of pain and sin? It is more likely that Jesus' tears were not for Lazarus at all, but for the grieving sisters, Mary and Martha. If he went for Lazarus, it would be the one and only funeral that brought him to tears. It is more natural to think of Jesus as shaping the sorrow of the two sisters, as he shared the woes of the world about him. He indeed "acquainted with grief."

Man's Worst Enemy

Many people, perhaps most, think of death as the worst enemy of man. Death is called once by Paul the "last enemy," but neither Paul nor any other writer in the Bible (except Ecclesiastes) looks at death as man's worst enemy. That place is reserved for sin. The damage that sin can do is worse than any damage death can do. This is not to say that prevention of death, or rather postponement of death, which is all that medical science can accomplish, is not worth while. If "Thou shalt not kill" is a divine command, there is another commandment wrapped up, as it were, in that one: Thou shalt do all things possible to preserve and prolong life—thine own and the lives of others. Nevertheless, though the healing professions owe much to Christianity and have contributed much, the fact remains that no death can be anything but postponed, while sin can actually be prevented. So our Lord spent most of his time not in breaking up funerals but in breaking the power of evil. It is less important, after all, to keep men from dying than it is to keep them from sinning.

Two Kinds of Life

Let us turn this thought around a bit and look at it another way. It is important enough to be looked at for a long time. Here is a question: What is the most important thing in the world, to you? Many persons would come up with what seems like the simple answer: Life. That is a true answer—perhaps. It depends on what kind of life you mean; for there are two kinds. One is the life that ends at the moment of death, the life that is tied to your heart and lungs. The other is the life called in the Apostles' Creed the Life Everlasting, but better called in the New Testament the Life Eternal. Then if Nathan Jesus did not prescribe for Lazarus a pill or potion guaranteed to keep him from dying again. Lazarus would die again, and Jesus knew it. So did his sisters. Jesus did not offer them life everlasting; they had it. God had made us human beings so that death is not the end. But the presuming, even the terrible, question is: What sort of person are you going to be, forever and ever? Without the life eternal, the life everlasting can be an eternity of frustration at best, torture at worst. Without the life eternal, life everlasting means only existence shut away from the Lord of Life. Eternal life is the kind of life that makes everlasting life worth the hope of man and the promises of Christ.

CENTENNIAL GROUP ISSUES NEW BOOKLET

A chronology of events leading up to Virginia's break with the Union, entitled "Virginia Joins the Confederacy," was issued today by the Virginia Civil War Commission.

The twenty-four page folder lists 113 significant events from November 6, 1860, the day Lincoln was elected, to the following June when Virginia turned over all of its forces to the Confederacy.

In the introduction to the pamphlet, the Commission describes the period covered as one of the most critical in the history of Virginia.

It was noted that all acts and resolutions adopted prior to April 4, 1861, were passed by the Virginia General Assembly, a bicameral legislative body composed of the House of Delegates and the Senate.

After that date they were adopted by the Secession Convention.

So far as statistical records reveal, very few people ever fail to respond to the dinner bell.

Mr. N. C. Jones a retired farmer of Chesterfield county Virginia, father of Mrs. R. Q. Lawing, died last Saturday evening at 5:30. He had made his home with Rev. and Mrs. Lawing since December. Funeral services were conducted from the Bethesda Church of Route 5, Colonial Heights, Va. Tuesday February 14 at 1:30 P. M. with the pastor of the church, Rev. Fred D. Gentle officiating and delivering the eulogy. He was assisted by Dr. Fred Gentle, pastor of Tabanacle Baptist Church, Petersburg, Va. who read the family letter and gave expressions of sympathy. The church choir rendered special selections. Mrs. Helen Morgan sang a beautiful solo, "I have done my work". Members of the choir served as flower bearers. The following grandchildren served as pallbearers: Messers L. A. Lawing, Timotheous Lawing, Willie Jones, Oscar Jones, Oswald Lynch and R. Q. Lawing, Jr.

He leaves the following to mourn his loss: One son Mr. Nicholas Jones, Harrisburg, Pa.; one daughter, Mrs. Florence J. Lawing, Appomattox, Va.. 15 grand children, 18 great grand children, one half sister, Mrs. Odell Braxton, Richmond and two half brothers, Messers Willie Jones of Richmond and Wilson Jones of Portsmouth, Va.; three daughters-in-law, Mrs. Marie Bland Jones of Concord, N. C., Mrs. Virgie Jones, Chesterfield, Va., and Mrs. Ola Brown Jones of Harrisburg, Pa; one son-in-law, Rev. R. Q. Lawing, Appomattox; one brother-in-law, Mr. Gallo Gallop of Detroit, Mich.; and one sister-in-law, Mrs. Ella Gallop of Greenwich, Conn; and a host of nieces, nephews and other relatives and friends. Interment was held in the family plot in the Jones cemetery. West Funeral Home of Appomattox was in charge of arrangements.

PURE WATER NEEDED FOR POULTRY FLOCKS

A pure water supply is just as necessary for poulty as for man, according to Dr. W. B. poultry pathologist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

He says to protect the health of poultry flocks, the water they drink should be suitable also for human use. Contaminated water sources may contain organisms harmful to poultry as well as humans. The organisms may or may not be the same.

If the water supply being used for poultry on the farm is not the same as that used for the family, check it periodically. For a test of potability and purity, a sample of the water supply can be sent to the State Health Department, Richmond.
